MICROFILM COPYING

Army Medical Library
Washington, D.C.

The Library recognizes that microfilm copying is a service which publicly supported reference libraries may well perform on an equal basis with that provided for readers and by interlibrary loans. In the pursuance of such a policy, microfilms will be sent without charge in lieu of the loan of the books to those who prefer them or where books or journals cannot be loaned.

In addition to the service to individuals, to accredited research institutions and to the various governmental establishments, microfilm copying is being conducted with special reference to the needs of the widely scattered medical units of the Armed Forces. This emergency need accounts now for the major part of the microfilm activities of the Army Medical Library and they are expanding at a rapid rate.

The operation of Microfilm Service, which has hitherto done microfilm copying in this Library at a cost just sufficient to pay its way, will be practically suspended beginning September 1, 1943.

Since microfilm copying is being done by this Library to promote medical research in its broadest aspects, orders may be sent direct by individuals or through the librarians of hospitals, medical schools and other institutions located in this country or elsewhere. In general, only the separate articles in the periodical literature will be copied. Long run copying may be done in special cases but will be subject to such modifications as the facilities of the Library and the present restricted supply of film, dictate.

In order to simplify the operation of the copying service, the use of order blanks will no longer be required. Titles and references to articles of which microfilm copies are desired should be written on letter paper and a carbon copy of each request should be included.

Governmental and emergency war establishments need not include postage where films are requested. In the case of all others who take advantage of this service in lieu of interlibrary loans, the franking privilege cannot be granted and medical librarians and individuals should send postage as follows:

For articles not exceeding 100 pages, send 1¢
For articles not exceeding 400 pages, send 3¢
For articles over 400 pages, send 4¢ stamps

The Purposes and Plan of Operation of

MEDICOFILM SERVICE

This microfilm copying service of the Army Medical Library has been established for the purpose of rendering the literature resources of this Library available to the many research workers at a distance from Washington, who are unable to come in person to consult its extensive collections. This is accomplished by copying photographically upon microfilm, the pages of medical periodicals containing descriptions of original research, and sending these to persons engaged in the advancement of medical science. This plan avoids the disadvantage of loaning the journals themselves and thus impairing the reference character of the Library. Microfilm copying, therefore, provides an improvement and extension of the service to research and learning which it is the function of scientific libraries to render.

Advantages of Microfilms. This method of photographing in reduced size upon moving-picture film, is the most economical procedure so far devised for making a single copy of printed material. It permits the research worker to secure copies of the papers upon a given subject at a far less cost than is possible in any other way. The microfilm copies so made can be attached to sheets of paper and filed in the same manner as reprints or manually prepared notes. They supplement at relatively little cost, the collections of research papers made in other ways and permit assembling, in the most convenient form, the large numbers of widely scattered publications required by authors of compendia, treatises, text books and all other digests of scientific literature.

Microfilm copies have, however, the disadvantage that the text can be read only with the aid of a magnifier or projector. These devices are available at present and more perfect and less expensive ones are being developed. Since microfilm copies usually represent only a small part of the literature collections made by an individual, the effort to read them will not be a serious task and will be very greatly compensated by the advantage of having at hand the complete copy of desired original publications.

Justification of Microfilm Copying. Although scientific research may in certain cases be undertaken for private gain, its publication is always for the benefit of others. The contribution of each individual represents a partial discharge of the obligation to those from whose previous publications each one has profited. The distribution of the periodical scientific literature by means of microfilms, to those not having access to it, makes it possible for many to pursue research who could not otherwise do so. Microfilm copying thus contributes to the advancement of science. Any restriction upon it such as may be imposed by copyright, is accordingly contrary to the public welfare. In order, however, to avoid misunderstandings on this point, MedicoFilm Service desires to emphasize that it does microfilm copying for research workers only on the mutual agreement that the copies so made are in lieu of loan of the publication or manual transcription of the original text, and they will be used only for the advancement of science and never in any manner contrary to the interests of the authors and publishers of the original papers.

Criticism of Microfilm Copying has arisen only in reference to the effect it may have upon subscriptions to journals. It is apparent, however, that such an apprehension is ill-founded when the total amount of research publication is considered in relation to the inconsiderable fraction of it which may be requested and can be reproduced in the form of microfilms. The Index Catalogue lists during the last 60 years about 2,500,000 titles of books and articles describing medical research. If it is assumed that one-half of these have become obsolete, the remaining 1,250,000 would require for their micro-filming, an equipment and personnel at least 100 times as great as that now installed in the Army Medical Library. Thus, it is evident that at its present scale of operation MedicoFilm Service could not copy more than an average of one percent of the contents of any one medical periodical in one year. Even if the Service should expand to 100 times its initial capacity only a single complete copy of any one journal would be distributed as microfilms annually. It may be concluded therefore that microfilm copying cannot be justly charged with discouraging subscriptions to scientific journals.

Microfilms are strips of 35 mm. motion picture film with images of printed pages photographed upon them in sequence. The printed text can be read only with the aid of a magnifier enlarging to five or more diameters or by means of a projecting apparatus. A special monocular viewer is available at $1.50, or equipped with handle and eye shield at $2.00. Highly perfected projectors cost at present about $100, but a simplified model at about $25 has been designed and will probably be available shortly.

Rates for Microfilm Copying. Since experience has shown that a large part of the cost of microfilm copying is consumed by accounting and clerical operations, an attempt to reduce these is being made by establishing a flat rate of 30 cents per complete article, not exceeding 30 pages in length, copied from a periodical received by the Army Medical Library. In the case of articles longer than 30 pages an additional charge of 10 cents for each succeeding 10 pages or fraction thereof is made.

Microfilms of articles up to 30 pages in length, will be cut in 1 to 3 pieces of 9 inches or less in length, each corresponding to 10 pages of text or less, and mailed flat in 9-inch envelopes. For articles exceeding 30 pages the microfilm will be sent rolled in a box in one piece.

Remittances for the number of articles desired may be made with the order, or, in the case of persons or institutions expecting to make repeated use of the Service, paid for at such intervals as found most convenient. All checks and money orders should be made payable to MedicoFilm Service.

Projection Enlargements of microfilms on 6" x 8" sheets of photographic paper, will be made at 10 cents per photoprint in addition to the charge for the original microfilm. It is suggested that since such projection print enlargements can be made in all photographic establishments, that each person have these made in his own locality, selecting only those pages of the original paper of which he may have special need.

Operating Economies. Since it is desired to serve as large a number of workers as possible at the lowest cost at which efficient service can be rendered, correspondence in connection with the orders will be reduced as far as possible to printed reply forms. In general, inquiries in regard to bibliographic matters, existence and location of publications, extent of the collections of the Library, etc., will be referred to such competent sources as may be available. Since any departure from the established routine of the work results in extra expense, it will not be possible to supply microfilms with special characteristics or accept orders for more rapid execution than the regular operation of the Service permits.

Rapidity of Service. Since the Army Medical Library lends its books only on inter-library requests, the number out at any one time is relatively small and delays in filling microfilm orders due to this cause should be slight. An effort will be made to reduce all other delays to as great an extent as possible and give as rapid and perfect service as our resources will permit. Incomplete or erroneous references will retard or prevent filling an order. In these cases a diligent effort will be made by the Library staff to find the desired article, but in general the personnel of the Library will not be able to make bibliographic searches. There are agencies which make a specialty of doing this, the names and addresses of which will be sent on request.

Transfer of Orders and remittances for microfilm copying from publications not available in the Army Medical Library, will be made to Bibliofilm Service of the Library of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Photo-duplication Laboratory of the Library of Congress, or elsewhere as the case may be.

List of Abbreviated Titles of Medical Periodicals. The following list of 4034 medical and related periodicals, received by the Army Medical Library, is published for the benefit of those desiring to obtain microfilm copies of medical publications. It shows the extent of the collections of this Library and permits one to ascertain in advance whether a copy of a given article may be obtained. Its use will avoid delays caused by sending orders for papers in journals not received by the Army Medical Library.
